Beschreibung

Ariadne is a web application system. It consists of a complete framework for the easy development and management of web applications, using PHP. The system uses a modular approach, using abstract interfaces for all transactions. This results in maximum freedom to change parts of the systems workings or add new functionality without needing to reprogram other parts. Ariadne currently comes complete with an advanced user management system, out of the box webbased management of all functionality and a few ready made modules to demonstrate the uses it can be put to. It implements a lot of 'common' code, which is used in most web applications. E.g. user management, content management, searching through data, etc.
